THE people of Wheeling, as is the case with the people of other cities, complain that their streets are not kept clean; and they go on throwing into the streets all manner of unsightly and unwholsome stuff. 'In Paris not so much as a scrap of paper is permitted to be thrown in the streets. The people of any city may do a great deal to keep their streets clean, and the more they do the more they will encourage the authorities to do their share. Let us try this in Wheeling and see how it will work.

A Most Amusing Paradox.

According to the unique view of the evidence taken by the Democratic members of the gubernatorial contest committee, in the matter of the Mercer and McDowell cases, the paradoxical way to State of West Virginia is to demonstrate that he is a resident. A cow of an un-known color with a white face is black will not go to the root of the trouble. her tail. The Race Issue,

Recent troubles at some points in the South between whites and blacks have precipitated a discussion anew of the race question. Senator Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, is quoted in an interview as expressing the opinion that the only solution of the growing magnitude of the issue is the buying, by our government, of a large scope of country in Central or South America and offering such inducements in the way of free homesteads as will induce the colored people to emigrate in overwhelming numbers. Unless this is done he foresees infinite trouble in the future, inasmuch as the growth of the two races in the South, the negroes increasing faster than the whites, is likely to be attended the Republican cause. The public will with frequent, desperate and bloody col-

Undoubtedly there is much in the future of the two races to induce the most serious reflection as to their ultimate relative relations and to tax the statesmanship of the country as to the solution of the social, political and economic problem involved. There are those who advocate the disfranchisement of the negro as a practical first step in this direction. They affect to believe that suffrage lies at the bottom of many of these collisions, and that as long as the negro has a vote so long will he be appealed to to mass his nationality against the whites at the polls. Therefore the only remedy is to take away the inducement to this solidifying of himself and eliminate him as a political element in that gentleman, when a boy, left college on account of the admission of a colored rights of the negro as a freedman. To be a despised race—pariahs socially— and at the same time to have no interested sympathizer or advocate in the halls of legislation or in the courts of justice was, in the opinion of many of the best and wisest people of our land, to jeopardize the whole future of the race, and make their lot even worse than in the days of slavery. In a word, it was to turn their nominal freedom into mockery and delusion. History records no instance of a people politically disfranchised having their rights respected. Unfortunately it is not in the nature of man to act justly towards his inferiors save as his lower motives are appealed to. The ballot is a possession that all law makers, courts of justice and candidates for office respect

We can't forcibly expatriate him. Suppose the Government appropriated the $50, 000,000 that Senator Hampton suggests, and suppose we bought a large Central or South American State, or even the whole of Mexico, still we can't compel him to go. We can't seize him and put him on board ships and forcibly transport him from our shores.

Any scheme that does not provide unquestioned sufficient inducements (working, we may say, automatically) to stimulate his rapid voluntary exit by show that a man is a non-resident of the wholesale, must fail, even if it induced the majority of the race to leave us, from the tip of her nose to the end of And the spectacle of the voluntary eminor any basis in human nature to sus For instance, it was claimed with confiscation and death, to induce mained behind. Foraker and the Colored Voter. The Democratic organ of this city publishes a "special" from Columbus giving a sensational account of an alleged revolt among Ohio negroes against Foraker and recall the fact that a year ago this same paper was publishing similar stories regarding the West Virginia colored voters; but, after all, how many of them voted the Democratic ticket? This is a favorite pastime of the Register when legitimate news is dull. According to the files of the Register for a year past, the colored brethren are leaving the Republican party in batal-lions. But all the same the Democratic majority on the gubernatorial contest committee goes right on deciding that the colored man votes the Republican ticket as naturally as a duck takes to water.
